PROTECT THE BIRDS

As a war measure and in line with food conservation bird lovers throughout the country are now making a special organized effort to protect the insect-eating birds which in spite of federal and state legislation, it is reported, are being killed daily by the thousands.
"The food destroyed in America by insects and small rodents would feed the people of Belgium," said T. Gilbert Pearson, well known ornithologist, while in Washington this week to confer with government specialists.
"Birds are the great natural enemies of these pests and thus help to save grain worth thousands of dollars annually. The laws of the states and of the Nation protect insect-eating birds, but many are being shot wantonly and for food."

"Evidence multiply that as a result of the high cost of meats, Italians in the North and negroes in the South have begun a perfect orgy of killing song birds for food. If there ever was a time in the history of America when we needed to preserve our insect-eating birds it is now. The greatly increased acreage of land now being put under cultivation calls for an equally increased number of birds to help keep down harmful insects. Government authorities here are responsible for the statement that one-tenth of the agricultural products in the United States are destroyed annually by insects. This percentage will certainly not be on the increase."

Mr. Pearson, backed by the thousands of members of the National Association of Audubon Societies of which he is secretary, is raising a special war fund for protective work at this time. He is making his appeal not only to bird lovers but to all Americans on patriotic ground.

As a part of the campaign inaugurated, Mr. Pearson is distributing free to farmers and others a cloth warning all against shooting birds on the property whereon the sign is displayed, and making a patriotic appeal, both in English and Italian, for the conservation of birds as a war measure.

A nation wide educational campaign is to be waged by the societies scattered throughout the country and also by the distribution of literature from the society headquarters at 1974 Broadway New York, explaining the value of insect eating birds to the farmer and to the Nation, at large.

Resolutions Sent to the President

Hon. Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.:
WHEREAS the United States of America, through its representatives, the president and the congress, is facing an unusual responsibility in its relations with the nations of the world,
This, then, is a time when, regardless of all other considerations, it is the duty of every American citizen, and should be his dearest wish, to do all in his power to support the government of the United States and renew his loyalty and patriotism.
The Lyceum and Chautauqua represent and are a most democratic expression of American ideals.
The Redpath Lyceum bureau was conceived during the dark days of the civil war and found its beginning and first work in the days of our country's needs—in the regeneration and rehabilitation of the United States in the years following the civil war.
The Redpath Lyceum bureau, through its spokesmen, the patriotic platform giants of that day, used its influence in maintaining American ideals and inspiring the people to patriotic service.
Therefore, in commemoration of the fact that it is resolved by the directors, officers and department managers of the Redpath Lyceum bureau in meeting assembled,
That we renew our own allegiance to America and our loyalty to the flag and our government;
That we use our utmost efforts in the coming Chautauqua and Lyceum season to promote the patriotic influences of our great country and to inspire the people to greater heights of loyalty and a greater consecration to the cause of democracy, which is to say, to the cause of American ideals.
THE REDPATH LYCEUM BUREAU AND CHAUTAUQUAS.

As part of this program of loyalty and service, the second day of the local Chautauqua has been designated as

"The right is more precious than peace, and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts—for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own governments, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free."
"To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that this day has come, who are privileged to spend their blood and their might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured."
